The list of Lennox and Addington deaths enclosed in the following pages is an "accurate as possible" transcription of the original handwritten death record which is available from the Ontario Archives on microfilm reels. Viewing of these records can be arranged through your local library or through any Church of the Latter Day Saints. Please keep in mind that the original record was written with pen and ink and not necessarily written neatly and some clerks had trouble with spelling. It was up to the person reporting the death to fill in the vital statistics as to the parents and their place of birth, along with the deceased birth date. In some cases, this was a neighbour who did not always know the vital statistics correctly.

The death records had no consistent way of reporting "still births". In some cases no given name was indicated, in others the given name was "Baby", and in yet others the given name indicated was "Stillborn". For clarity and indexing purposes, we have indicated all of the cases with the no "given name" as "Baby".

When looking for a particular record, please keep in mind that sometimes woman were listed by their maiden name even though they were married and other times by their married name. Stillbirths were sometimes named after the death certificate had been issued. People who were taken to one of the Kingston Hospitals or sanitarium (tuberculosis) and passed away there, are registered with the records for Kingston/Frontenac County.

Medical terms given for the cause of death have been spelled on the original records in a very wide range of ways. Where we have found the term used in the "Dictionary of Scientific and Technical Terms" by McGraw-Hill, spelling has been corrected. A glossary of the more common medical terms has been included in an appendix to help with the common causes of death. This was a time before antibiotics and safety in the work place. The causes of death listed indicate that fact all too well. This was also a time before a "social safety net" and suicide appears to be much higher than one would first expect.

Appendix A ----- Page 178

Glossary of common medical terms and their meaning taken from the McGraw-Hill "Dictionary of Scientific and Technical Terms", (simplified or shortened).

Glossary of cemeteries in the area.

Glossary of county townships and small villages in the area. A county map is also included.

Master index of names, registration number & year, and the page number of where each individual can be found in the book.

The death records are printed in landscape mode in an attempt to fit in as much information as possible. However, some information has been left off from the original record due to the limited space. These include the name and address of the attending doctor, length of illness, street or concession/lot address of the deceased, address of the informant, name and address of the undertaker, former occupation and type of industry the deceased had worked, length of residence at present location, and the certifying clerk. Please refer to the original microfilm record at the reel number and record number indicated for this information. The death form changed over the years and information required also changed. Blank columns indicate that that particular data was not collected or required by the form of the day. Blank spaces in a particular record indicate that the original had been left blank as well. The electronic "age" calculator used by the transcribers indicate the clerks often had trouble with this calculation. These values have not been corrected. However, in cases where the birth year has been left off but the date and exact age has been indicated, we have put in the birth year as calculated.

The following abbreviations are used:

dau	daughter	d-inlaw	daughter in-law	s-inlaw	son in-law
f-inlaw	father in-law	b-inlaw	brother in-law	m-inlaw	mother in-law
nep-inlaw	nephew in-law	s-dau	step daughter	g-dau	granddaughter

Glossary of Medical Terms and their Description

Some of the more common medical terms found in these deaths have been listed in alphabetical order and a description has been written using the "Dictionary of Scientific and Technical Terms" by McGraw-Hill. The authors neither have nor pretend to have any knowledge of medicine. If the medical term's description seems in doubt, please refer to a medical person for clarification.

"Inflammation" in most cases can be exchanged for "infection" for the layman. Without antibiotics, these infections were most often fatal. After transcribing over two thousand deaths, one might also speculate that acute indigestion as a cause of death might possibly be a symptom of a heart attack.

Medical Term	Description
adenoma	a benign tumor of glandular origin and structure
aesthesia	the capacity for sensation, perception, or feeling albuminuria	the presence of protein in the urine, principally albumin, generally indicating kidney disease
anemia pernicious	anemia resulting from a lack of vitamin B12, causing degeneration of the spinal cord
angina	any disease marked by spasmodic pain associated with sensation of choking or suffocation
angina pectoris	sudden chest pain accompanied by pain in the arms, shoulders and other sites
